National Tree Day 30 July: Planting Trees for Injured Wildlife

Feathertail glider in care

This year, on 30th July, our usual annual National Tree Day Planting event has a different, particularly valuable focus. We will plant species that have been selected to provide just the right food for our injured local creatures. Local wildlife carers need to find suitable plant material for the native animals in their care, to ensure they thrive and can be returned to their forest homes. The tubestock we plant this year will sustain them with a good food source for years to come.

This is a great way in which our human community can help the creatures of our native community. So please join us in this great initiative.

When: Sunday 30th July, 9am

Where: Landcare Centre, Hartley Rd East. Park in the Centre grounds.

Bring: a spade or mattock if you have one (Landcare have some tools if you have none), drinking water, gloves and closed in shoes. And perhaps bring a neighbour or friend too? Supervised children are very welcome.

Enjoy: morning tea, coffee and cake, provided by Landcare, in company with friendly locals.
